

A map of the Republic of Serbia, outlined in black. The country is divided into numerous administrative districts, each outlined in black. A large area in the western part of the country is shaded in green, indicating a specific region of interest. The shading is darker in some areas and lighter in others, suggesting a gradient or different sub-regions within the green area. The eastern part of the country is mostly white, with some districts outlined in black.

droughtmonitor.unl.edu

